What's new in Tiger Fighter 1931 Tora!Tora! MP051:

R Gun Complete + Interior - Body + Flight Model Tiger Fighter Recommended Posts What is Up Hyunnie Everyone knows that the Tiger fighter is one of the most produced fighter of the year, this is my version of it with its flying model. The model is split into 4 parts which are the electric motor the body shell the fuselage and the wings, here you have it... pics inside before I close the transaction period. The model is very easy to fly however, the motor is fairly hard to fly so here, is the motor in it's default mode before I attach the wings to it, ready for beaklets. The interior of the plane is so good, everything line up on its place, looks really nice and in my opinion it was better than the interior of the Tiger Moth that I did here. However, if someone want's to know how I did it, I'll do it. Have fun!!! I painted the model with Tech Art Coat and then apply Ceramic and 2 thinner of Krylon. The model had problems when I was leaving the project. Most of the parts melted. Luckily, I did all paint test before leaving the office, and here we go. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites Those 4 parts are super nice. I always wonder how other people do it in such little space. I bet your modeller deserves a prize. The only thing I'd like to know is how you managed the four fold brush. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites Awesome job Hyun_Nien!! I love how well you made it look like it's all one part! I love that little fuselage. I would have never guessed it was a daisy-chained sculpt, but your variety speaks volumes about your sculpting skills! Bravo! Share this post Link to post Share on other sites In this picture before I blend the blend, my hand position that I put on the battlestar is that, it is handy to zoom in on his waist to adjust the position. All the parts fit inside naturally like they were glued before, but of course they aren't glued because they are easy to detach and reattach. so be
